

“We live in extraordinary times, and we need to evolve as a profession. Futurists say that the rate of change will be almost incomprehensible, and the implications are incredible as well. This comes home to roost in our profession.”

How Small Firms Can Increase Enterprise Value

Competition is getting stronger for basic tax and accounting services and the landscape is rapidly changing. In addition, CPA firms are facing other challenges including:

- ★ Enhanced technology
- ★ Fee compression
- ★ Finding talent
- ★ Increased regulations

In order to compete and add value to their firms, many CPA firms have broadened their offerings to include other business advisory and consulting services for their clients.

By doing so, they strengthen their relationship with clients as a trusted advisor, helping them in other areas such as business succession and retirement, investment, estate and insurance planning.

Offering these services, however, is a complex decision because of the breadth of expertise required. The very nature of your relationship with your clients is what enables you to offer these services as an additional line of business.

There are many benefits of expanding your service offerings to include more business and financial consulting:

- ★ Creates deeper relationships
- ★ Improves client retention
- ★ Provides additional revenue streams
- ★ Produces higher income and valuation levels
- ★ Attracts new clients due to the breadth of services
- ★ Increases professional and client referrals
- ★ Helps attract talent

Adding these new services sounds simple, but to do so effectively, you need an experienced partner to help you deliver these services without adding overhead to your firm.

Triton Financial Group offers a strategic partnership for CPA firms to add proven resources with hands-on experience in high-value, strategic areas. Contact us to find out how you can increase the value for your clients and of your CPA firm.
